Ontario Mineral Tracker

WCS Canada created the Ontario Mineral Tracker to make it easier for people to know about mineral exploration that is happening – and to make it easier for people to make their voices heard if mining activity is not wanted.

The Ontario Mineral Tracker shares maps for all new proposed mineral exploration permits on a Facebook page, and through a weekly email newsletter. On each map, there is also information on how to contact the provincial government to share concerns and be part of decision-making about new mining activity. If you are interested in previous mineral exploration permits, you can also visit our archive of previous newsletters.

The screenshot shows a web browser displaying the website morethanminerals.ca. The page features a teal header with a navigation menu including "Communities", "Environment", "Minerals & Money", "Regional Planning", and "Resources & Toolkits". A teal banner at the top contains a "BACK TO WCS CANADA" link on the left and a "MAKE A DONATION" link on the right. The main content area has a dark background with a green brushstroke graphic. The text reads: "Ontario Mineral Tracker" and "WCS Canada created the Ontario Mineral Tracker to make it easier for people to know about mineral exploration that is happening – and to make it easier for people to make their voices heard if mining activity is not wanted." Below this, a paragraph explains that the tracker shares maps for new proposed mineral exploration permits on a Facebook page and through a weekly email newsletter, and provides links to contact the provincial government and visit an archive of previous newsletters. At the bottom, three buttons are visible: "Launch the Ontario Mineral Tracker Facebook Page", "Sign Up for the Ontario Mineral Tracker Newsletter" (circled in red), and "Visit the Ontario Mineral Tracker Archive".
